Miller Freeman, manager of the Pacific Fisherman, a new monthly trade journal published in Seattle, was in Astoria yesterday in the interest of the publication, which is an interesting addition to the fishing and trade literature.

The Mutual Life Insurance company, advertisement of which appears elsewhere in this paper, and which is represented in this city by Van Dusen & Co., last year paid to policy holders in Oregon $36,106. Total paid in the United States, $12,850,217.

Fred Hammond, brother of A. B. Hammond, died Tuesday at his home in Los Angeles of Bright's disease. Mr. Hammond had been ill for some time and death was expected. He was associated with his brother in some of his Montana enterprises. He was unmarried.

Fred Brown, agent for the Evening Telegram, desires to inform the patrons of his paper that last evening's issue did not arrive in the city last night. The Journal likewise is not at hand. The nonappearance of the papers cannot be accounted for, but this evening they will doubtless be delivered as usual.

A general meeting for the members of the Commercial club to discuss the matter of putting up a club house has not yet been called, but as it is the expressed wish of many that more commodious quarters be secured, it doubtless soon will be. At a recent meeting of the directors of the club the matter was discussed and also seemed favorable to the idea.

A special to the Oregonian says that Senator Fulton, upon request of the people of Salem, called on the supervising architect to ascertain whether there was sufficient money available for completing the approaches to the new public building at that place, and was advised that there would be money enough, and that no further appropriation would be necessary.

There is every indication that attendance at the concert to be given tomorrow evening at the M. E. church will be large. The young people have been working hard and have secured an excellent program which will be published in tomorrow morning's Astorian. The first number will appear promptly at 8 o'clock. Tickets are on sale at Griffin's book store.

A wood scow belonging to the Astoria Woodyard company sank Tuesday afternoon on the north side of the river near Knappton, by getting a hole knocked into her through a contact with the piling. Effort will at once be put forth to have the scow raised and repaired. A quantity of stowwood was aboard her, at the time of the accident and most of it was lost.

George M. Miller of this city has received an intimation from those who should know the intention of the Alaskan boundary commission that he will be summoned to testify as to conditions in the far north, says the Eugene Guard. Mr. Miller is well acquainted with the details and is one of the best informed men in the United States on Alaskan affairs and could no doubt give information of great importance to the commission.

Louis A. Merrick of the firm of Merrick & Mills, attorneys for the F. E. Sander company, is authority for the statement that construction work on the Sander electric road from index to Mineral City will be commenced within 30 days. Mr. Mills, who is manager of the Index Townsite company, went to Seattle yesterday for the purpose of signing the contracts whereby the railroad company will receive a fourth interest in the townsite of Index as a bonus for the building of the railroad and a smelter.

Recently the Interstate commerce commission gave a hearing in Washington in the matter of recent advances in freight rates on grain and grain products, dressed meats and packing-house products, iron, etc. Officials of a large number of eastern roads were present, and several of them testified. In general their testimony was a reiteration of the statements concerning increased cost of operation and maintenance already made in the formal answers of their roads to the commission's circular inquiry sent out a few weeks ago.

It now transpires that the promoters of the new bankrupt Pacific Packing & Navigation company obtained much of their prestige by the strength of such names as J. P. Morgan, August Belmont, James W. Alexander, Stuyvesant Fish and other financial giants who were among the stockholders, and whose interest was supposed to insure its success. But even these magical names were not sufficient to keep aloft a concern which made such gigantic financial movements on so small an actual valuation. The concern was able to consolidate 16 companies and firms, and owned and operated 27 plants on Puget sound and the Alaska coast, engaged in the salmon industry. The company has a capital stock of only $13,250,000 and a bond issue of about $1,000,000. The application for the appointment of receivers showed that the company owes $2,553,700 in bills payable, half of which consists of demand notes that are either due or about to fall due. The bill also sets

DEMENTED YOUNG GIRL
LEAPS OVERBOARD

Miss Emma Mustela Makes Attempt to End Her Life—
Body Had Not Been Recovered Up to a Late Hour This Morning.

At about 8:30 o'clock last night quite a stir was created upon the streets by the report that a woman had committed suicide by leaping from the roadway near Scow bay. Upon investigation it developed that Miss Emma Mustela had attempted to end her life but whether she succeeded in doing so or not no one has been in a position to determine. The case so far is a bewildering one and possibly only the light of day will clear matters up.

Miss Emma Mustela, a young lady 18 years of age, had resided with her parents on an island in the Columbia river near Quincy, until a short time ago since which time she has been in this city. The late Mrs. John Adams was a sister of Miss Mustela and the latter's object in being here was to take care of her sister's infant child. She resided at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Victor Miller on Franklin avenue near Seventeenth street.

Up to yesterday Miss Mustela had given every indication of being perfectly rational, but Mr. Miller states that at dinner the young woman displayed signs of weakened intellect, her conversation and manner generally occasioning some little alarm. She had grieved greatly over the death of her sister and her condition was accounted for through exhaustion, as a consequence of her distress of mind. In the evening she showed no signs of improvement, but her condition, on the contrary, became more alarming.

Mr. Miller was at his place of business on Commercial street when a 'phone message announced to him that forth that while the assets of the company are valued at $15,000,000, if a sale were to take place they would not realize more than $3,000,000, which is probably a very high estimate.

Receipts of the Britt-O'Keefe fight pulled off in Portland Tuesday night netted $4000, 60 percent of which was divided between the fighters, Britt receiving $720 and O'Keefe $1580. Britt, however, is not satisfied with his end of the bargain and insists he should have been permitted to win out. O'Keefe appears to be as anxious as the Californian to try it over again and a match is being arranged to take place next month. Britt had already arranged to fight in San Francisco in April, but he has wired there calling off the proposed contest.

The tenure of office for the old pilot commissioners expires today and the new board, it is understood, will organize immediately. A great deal of interest is being centered in the election of a secretary for the board, and there are two live candidates in the field, Leander Lebeck and P. B. Sovey. The friends of each are working for their favorites. Mr. Sovey is unable to render any active aid in his own behalf, being confined to his home with a severe illness, but his supporters have redoubled their efforts and are confident that he will land the position.

Yesterday morning Sheriff Linville took James McClarny into custody on the charge of insanity and the unfortunate man is now locked up in the county jail. McClarny, who is known as the "Irish giant," imagines that he has a number of sanguinary enemies who would take great delight in killing him and that he has had all he could do to prevent them from doing so. As he is quite violent a close watch is kept upon him to prevent his doing himself an injury, he having signified his desire to commit suicide. He will be examined today and will probably be started for Salem in the evening.

The construction of the Lewis and Clark telephone line has progressed in every way satisfactorily, though a few days ago work was temporarily suspended owing to the circuit court being in session and the necessity of some of the men employed being in attendance. Operations will probably be resumed today. Poles have been placed from Chadwell to the south side of the bay and things are about in readiness to stretch the wire. There will be two lines run from the city to the north side of the bay and beyond that but one will be operated. In all there will be about 20 families benefitted by the system.

Miss Mustela had committed suicide and he hastened home at once. He learned that the young woman had started from the house, accompanied by Mrs. Miller, for the purpose of seeking a physician and the two had walked down Seventeenth street in the direction of Commercial. When they had reached the crossing at Exchange street Miss Mustela suddenly left her companion and ran east. Mrs. Miller at once divining that she meant to do herself some injury, pursued her as rapidly as possible, but was unable to overtake the unfortunate young woman. At a point between the McCann residence and the old Krager woodyard the demented girl climbed over the railing on the north side of the street and leaped into the river before the eyes of her friend who had tried so hard to save her. Mrs. Miller and others sought out the place and they used their best endeavors to locate the body, but without avail. The tide was very low at the time, too low, some assert, to cause the girl to drown unless the fall had incapacitated her. So the theory is advanced that Miss Mustela did not lose her life at all, but that after striking the water had walked ashore on the mud flats and probably had wandered into the woods where she still is. The probabilities, however, point more strongly to her death, and it is generally believed that the searchers failed to find the body, which was evidently washed out by the flood tide.

The whole affair is a most distressing one and Mrs. Miller is about prostrated by the shock.

The two old sons of Mr. and Mrs. Gille of Svenson lost the fore-finger of his right hand yesterday. The little fellow got in a dispute with a brother as to the possession of an ax—hence the accident. He was brought down on the night train and taken to the hospital. Doctor Pilkington was summoned, who found amputation of the finger necessary.

THE NEW POSTAGE STAMPS.

The new series of two-cent stamps now in preparation will have the American flag as one of its designs, supplanting the photograph of Washington, which has appeared for so many years, and with which we have all become so familiar. Another stamp that has become very important is the private die stamp placed over the neck of each bottle of Hostetter's Stomach Bitters, as a preventive against unscrupulous dealers palming off counterfeit remedies for the genuine, claiming that they are "just as good as Hostetter's." Don't accept any such imitation, especially if you value your health. The genuine bitters will positively cure loss of appetite, nausea, indigestion, belching, headache, dyspepsia and constipation. Fifty years of such cures are back of it. Then don't fail to try it.
